

The Impulse of the Christmas Conference

On the way to 2023

Anthroposophical Society in Switzerland

The centenary of the Christmas Conference at the turn of the year 2023-2024 brings with it not only festive occasions, but also great tasks. It is well known that with this conference, Rudolf Steiner brought forward his last attempt to build the Anthroposophical Society into an effective working instrument for anthroposophy against the background of various tasks and challenges facing modern civilisation. In founding the General Anthroposophical Society, with the School of Spiritual Science as its esoteric core, or soul, he provided humanity with a completely new beginning, conceiving the Society in a differentiated and exceptionally far-sighted way as regards the structure of its social forms. He positioned the Society, with its new form and direction, so that it could grow equal to the great challenges of the present and future, able to answer them both esoterically and exoterically.

Through its annual February conferences leading up until 2023, the Council of the Anthroposophical Society in Switzerland has given itself the task of penetrating more deeply into the process initiated by Rudolf Steiner and to help raise this in our awareness. In our February gatherings at the Goetheanum, we will turn to the themes and arrangements of the Christmas Conference in a systematic way, examining both the ideals and intentions envisioned and outlined by Rudolf Steiner.

We hope that we will be successful, through this intensive work, in establishing a strong impulse for further building together the Anthroposophical Society as a community of like minded people.
